Acronyms used in propeller designation:

E - Electric motor propeller

Propellers specifically designed to be used with electric motors. They feature a thinner hub and a specific blade profile to minimize weight.

EVO - Evolution type

The newest type of our propeller designed to have wider blades and more efficient profile. They do not replace the normal version propellers as the wider blades do not suit every application.

L/LF - Light version (Polyurethane core)

Propellers with polyurethane core that are 30-40% lighter than our normal version propellers. By adding the core we can achieve lower weight while keeping the same strength.

LAF - Light AF (On Demand)

Light and Firm propellers especially designed for The World Record in a multicopter battery-powered flight. Available for all multicopter propellers - contact us for details.

HD - Heavy Duty applications

Multicopter propellers designed with consideration of heavy duty applications. Due to the stronger hub and enforced leading edges, they are able to withstand harsh conditions and high loads.

MC - Multicopter propeller

Light propellers made for multicopter and VTOL applications optimized for hover performance.

N - Narrow blade

Standard propellers with a narrower blade. If you need to load your engine less but the nearest prop with smaller diameter is too "light", it is possible to use "N" prop instead.

P - Pusher prop (clockwise/right rotation)

Propellers with CW rotation. Most of our OTS gas propellers are made in CCW rotation for gas motors in puller configuration. Contact us for P version of the standard propeller.

Q - Extra Quiet

Q propellers are our reaction to the demand of propellers with lower noise and high efficiency qualities. The new shape of their profile and the blade tip allowed us to decline the noise and keep the same efficiency.

S - Scimitar blade shape

The scimitar shape of the blade that resembles a scimitar sword increases the sweep along the leading edge. It is designed for high speed flights and lowering noise level.

TH - Thin profile

Thin profile of the blade. Originally designed for electric motors but due to their structural design and high-quality manufacturing they can be used with gas engines flawlessly.

W - Wide blade

Standard propellers with a wider blade. If you need to load your engine more but the nearest prop with a larger diameter is too "heavy", it is possible to use "W" prop instead.
